Taxes and deductions

A company's repurchase of its own registered shares with the aim of reducing capital is treated, for the purposes of both Swiss federal withholding tax and of direct taxes, as the partial liquidation of the company in question. Specifically, this has the following tax implications for the selling shareholders:

1. Withholding tax

Since 1 January 2020, in the event of a share repurchase, a company must use its capital contribution reserves, if available, to the same extent as its other reserves (50:50 rule). Accordingly, to the extent that the Swiss Federal Tax Administration confirms that capital contribution reserves are available, withholding tax is levied at a rate of 35% on up to half the difference between the repurchase price and the par value of the registered shares. The Company or its mandated bank shall deduct the tax from the repurchase price on behalf of the Swiss Federal Tax Administration.

Persons domiciled in Switzerland are entitled to a refund of the withholding tax provided they had equitable ownership of the shares at the time of redemption, have properly declared/recognized the income from the repurchase and no tax evasion has been committed (Art. 21 of the Swiss Withholding Tax Act). Persons domiciled outside Switzerland may reclaim part of the withholding tax subject to the provisions of any relevant double taxation agreement.

2. Direct taxes

The following explanations relate to the levying of direct federal taxes. As a rule, the same practice applies to cantonal and municipal taxes as to direct federal taxes.

a) Privately held as private assets:

In the case of a direct return of registered shares to the company, the difference between the repurchase price and the par value of the registered share constitutes taxable income.

b) Registered shares held as business assets:

In the case of a direct return of registered shares to the company, the difference between the repurchase price and the profit/income tax value of the registered share constitutes taxable income.

Shareholders domiciled outside Switzerland for tax purposes will pay tax in accordance with the laws of the country in which they are domiciled.

3. Fees and deductions

The repurchase of own shares for the purpose of a capital reduction is exempt from stamp duty for the selling shareholder. However, the SIX Swiss Exchange's fees still have to be paid.
